

Considerations When Selecting Your Ram Orientation for First-Year Students Session Format

We want you to select the format of Ram Orientation that best meets your needs. No matter which format or session you choose, you will have access to the required Pre-Orientation modules, student staff, resources, and course registration.

Here are some things to consider when making your selection:

Health

On-Campus sessions of Ram Orientation will have both indoor and outdoor components. Colorado State University's COVID guidelines can be found at <https://covid.colostate.edu/>. Ram Orientation will operate in compliance with all CSU and Larimer County COVID guidelines and regulations.

Travel

If you have concerns or are unable to travel to Fort Collins during the summer, you may want to consider a Virtual session of Ram Orientation.

Internet Access

Virtual sessions of Ram Orientation will take place via Zoom. Students attending will need access to the internet as well as a computer or laptop computer for the duration of the day-long experience.

Schedule

On-Campus sessions of Ram Orientation for First-Year Students will be two days long. Virtual sessions will last for one day. With both formats, you will need to plan to be available for the entirety of each session. Leaving early may result in not being able to register for your classes. Choose a format and session that will allow you to be completely present for the duration of your Ram Orientation experience.

If you have any questions or need help deciding which format is best for you, contact Orientation and Transition Programs at orientation@colostate.edu or 970-491-4184.
